

SENIOR ADVOCATE

Prime News for Those in Their Prime

Relatively Speaking

Dana Smith

Published 08/27/2007 - 6:55 p.m. CDT

You've managed to carve a few minutes of personal time out of your busy schedule. Wouldn't it be great if you could watch an entertaining show based on your favorite hobby, family history? What if you could choose which family history topic you wanted to watch and when you wanted to watch it.

A few years ago this might have been wishful thinking. But, thanks to the Internet, wishes become reality at rootstelevision.com. Whether you are a beginner, professional or somewhere in between, you can find quality family history television programming that you can watch on your computer.

Roots Television programs vary in length from three minutes to eight minutes. The shows can be viewed sequentially or you can watch one episode and return later to see the next segment.

Yesterday, I watched "Beneath Los Angeles" which is a tour of the graves of the "Famous, the Infamous and the Just Plain Dead." Set to background music it is a visual tour of the headstones of Hollywood's permanent residents.

There is a large selection of programs with helpful tips and tricks. Whether you are looking for help with the basics, or wondering what vital records you need, the answers are just a click away.

Your schedule may be full but next time you have a few minutes indulge yourself. At rootstelevision.com it's all about you.

Cindy Sue Blair is a nationally syndicated columnist. Her articles appear in publications throughout the US and Canada. Read her blog and listen to her radio show at www.ExploreTheMidwest.com.